

GOLDEN ENEMY

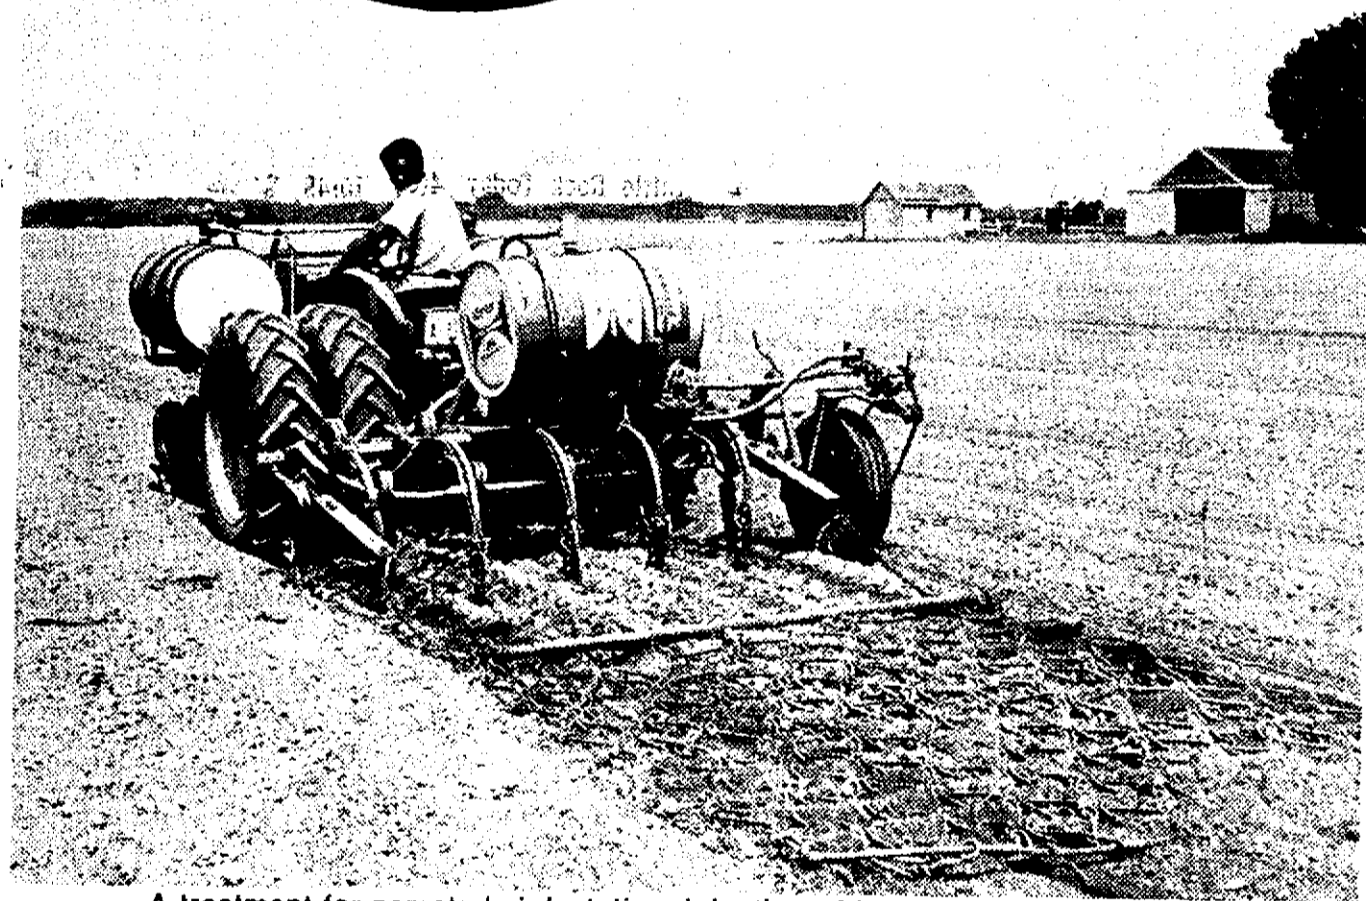

The microscope makes visible potato root hairs infested with golden nematodes.

This Week's PICTURE SHOW—AP Newsfeatures.

Nematologists work in the laboratory to identify golden nematodes, as the first step in their control.

A treatment for nematode infestation: injection with a fumigant, followed by chain harrowing to fill in the furrows.

The golden nematode is the most serious pest which threatens the American potato industry. A parasite worm, it has, in fact, been found to be one of the hardest crop pests to deal with in temperate regions all over the world.

Its effect is to make potato growing uneconomical, when heavy infestation occurs. For example, the edible potato yield from such an area might be less than the number of seed potatoes planted in the first place.

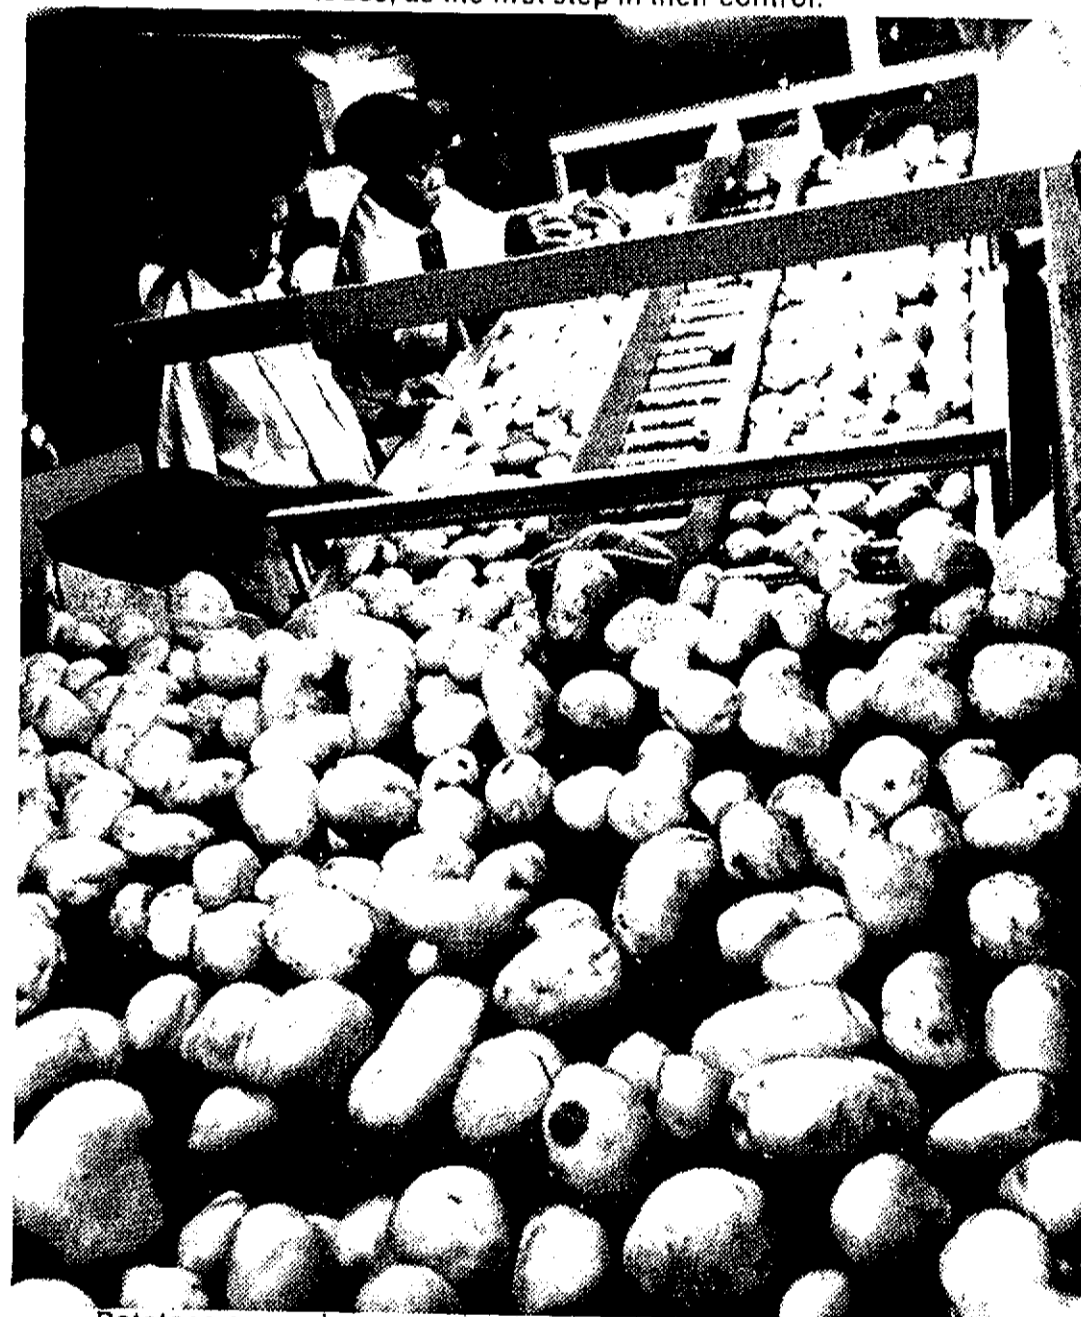

The golden nematode had been known to occur in the U.S. only in Nassau and Suffolk counties, Long Island, New York. Then, in December 1963, it was discovered in Steuben County, New York, and, in February, 1969, in New Castle, Delaware.

The pest (scientific name Heterodera rostochiensis) passes from egg to adult in 38 to 48 days. The dead bodies of the females, called cysts, are attached to the potato roots and act as protective coverings for the fertilized eggs inside. In spring the eggs hatch out, and the larvae migrate on to the host plants — which they rob of water and nutrients.

The cysts are visible to the naked eye: at first pearly white, then darkening through gold and orange to brown. They can become detached from the roots and remain in the soil after the crop has been harvested.

Since 1944, a State quarantine has been enforced in New York to prevent the spread of the golden nematode to uninfested areas. Marketing regulations and restrictions have been placed on the movement of potatoes, top soil and other commodities capable of carrying the nematode.

At the same time, cooperative Federal-State research and regulatory programs are being expanded to develop better ways to detect infestations of the pest, and to prevent its spread. The United States Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service is the cooperating Federal Agency.

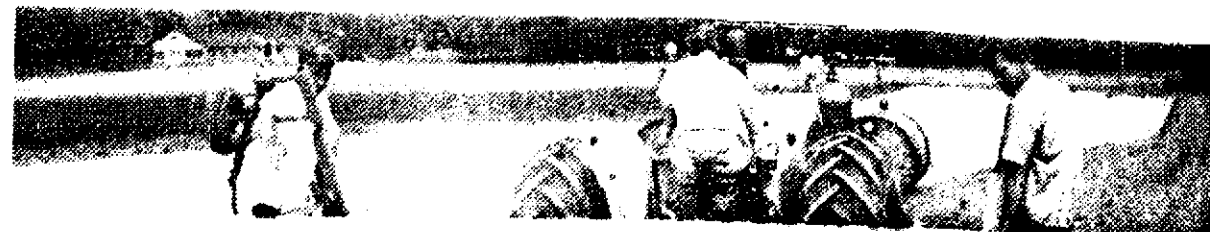

Potatoes grown in quarantined area are washed and sorted before being sold for consumption.

LET THE PAST DIE

When I was three years old, my father killed my mother. There were seven children who were divided among relatives. We girls saw each other quite a bit, but we were led to believe we were cousins—until I found out the truth from an older sister.

Since that day I've wanted to know more about my father, but my stepmother won't tell me a thing, even whether he is dead or alive. I am now 21 and married, but I won't rest easy until I see him again. I think he is alive and very lonely and I want to help him if I can.

All I've seen is the short newspaper report of the shooting, and a letter written to him by my stepmother in 1954, saying he was sorry for his mistakes and that he missed us.

How can we find him, outside of hiring a lawyer which I can't afford? All I have to go on is his name and that we lived in Corpus Christi, Texas at the time of the murder.—MRS. M. G.

Dear MRS. G: If your step-parents had thought any good would come of a meeting with your father, don't you think they would reveal his address? Or perhaps they too don't know.

My only suggestion is that you run an ad in the Corpus Christi paper (or write a "Letter to the Editor") asking for information leading to the whereabouts of your father. (But somehow I hope married years, I now find, that my husband and sister-in-law you don't follow it!—H.

Dear Helen: After 13 happy (his brother's wife) have had an affair off and on for eight years. He told me how it happened, and I can understand why, as if it's thrown at a man, he takes what is offered. She has fooled around with my sister's husband and several others.

My husband says he loves me and the children and this woman means less than nothing to him or, for that matter to any of the men. She's available, that's all. He swears now that he's finally brought it out in the open, he'll have nothing more to do with her, no matter how she chases him.

Helen, can a woman forget that her husband has been untrue to her, or will this always come between us?—CONFUSED WIFE

Dear Wife: A wife may never quite forget, but she can understand and forgive. Sometimes a marriage is even happier for having weathered this kind of storm.

P.S. It will be easier if your raunchy sister-in-law gets out of all your lives—including her husband's!—H.

Dear Helen: How come when nothing is considered a sin any more, nobody seems to have as much fun?—F.W.

Dear F: ... Consider the original apple: Forbidden fruit tastes better!—H.

Dear Helen: Okay, so the little ladies want equality—same jobs, same pay, same considerations. So when are they going to integrate the men's and ladies' rooms?—FOR EQUALITY AND FRATERNITY

Dear FE and F: Why don't you ask the militant feminists? I'm not one of them!—H.

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble, or just plain trouble, let Helen help YOU. She will also welcome your own amusing experiences. Address Helen Bottel in care of Hope Star, Copyright, 1967, Inc.

Meet the 'Poor Man's Pucci'

By JOYCE GABRIEL

NEA Staff Correspondent

MIAMI—(N E A)—The white stucco building with the pink tile roof looks like a palazzo in Florence. The palm trees surrounding it conjure up Granada. Tourists have entered to make dinner reservations.

The building is neither a palazzo, nor a relic of old Spain, nor a restaurant. It's the manufacturing plant for Mr. Dino fashions.

Color is the keynote in today's fashion world. And color is what Mr. Dino fashions is all about. Max Cohen, who started this firm eight years ago, brought his engineering know-how into textiles and developed a silk-screen printing process for fabric which produces vivid shades that can be worked into the most intricate designs.

For his summer line, Mr. Dino selected Bantoni for his prints. The fabric lends itself well to the casual resort clothes he designs. It's wrinkle-resistant and fluid so that the print flows with the line of the clothes.

Pants, dress over pants, shifts, shorts and one-piece culottes come alive in Paisley and floral prints. As many as seven different colors can be used on one garment.

Inside, the reception area of the plant retains the Florentine flavor of the outside, with Michelangelo frescoes, fruitwood desks and marble-topped tables accenting the decor.

In the plant itself, esthetics

Bra with shorts with a bold, lacey print (left) is sheltered by the hi-jacker shirt in sheer voile with negative Paisley design. Or with pants and brief bra and shirt with full billowy sleeves. The demi-dress and pants (right), swirled with bold print in breeze-swept Nassau colors, features a top that is banded close to the neckline and halter-shaped shoulders. It is a look that spans the hours from day into evening. These Ban-Lon fashions were created by Mr. Dino for "Bahamas Summer Holiday."

is replaced by utility. Huge machines and skilled technicians plan fabric designs, blend colors and bake them into the fabrics. Two barefoot workers, dressed in shorts and paint-smeared shirts, mix colors to come up with new shades.

Because of its Miami location, the plant employs many Cuban refugees and, in some cases, has turned them from laborers into skilled technicians.

If Pucci is the Cadillac of the fashion print world then

Mr. Dino is the Ford. He has managed to produce color prints for the medium-price market. Like Ford, Max Cohen had a "better idea" in producing the "poor man's Pucci."

Fashion Headliners

This fall, ankle-length coats may make fashion headlines. These almost floor-length styles are the greatest of the great coats to come along yet.

STITCHIN' TIME

By JOANNE SCHREIBER

Terrycloth is everybody's summertime favorite. It's colorful and comfortable, easy-care and easy-sew, especially when big bath towels and co-ordinated wash cloths are used to make bright beach coverups.

From Cannon Mills comes the idea of pairing towels for a simple shift, rounding them for a drawstring bag, and shaping them into a mini-length hooded pullover. Here are instant instructions for sew-fast fashions:

For body of bag, remove fringe from ends of towel. Sew bias tape to long side of towel; turn under and stitch bottom edge to wrong side of towel to form casing. With right sides of towel together, join short ends of towel to form side seam of bag.

Hooded Beach Jacket
Materials needed: Four solid-color Velour bath towels (25 inches by 48 inches), for sleeves, jacket front, jacket back, three Sunflower wash cloths, (12 inches by 12 inches), for pocket and hood, 1/4-yard cotton for hood lining (optional), 18-inch heavy duty zipper, 1 1/2 yards cotton bias tape, one yard of one-inch elastic.

Cut strips from bottoms of two towels for desired shoulder-to-hem length, plus three-inch hem allowance. Use this material for center hood section. Cut two strips 4 1/2 inches wide by 12 inches long, seam together along 12-inch length, to make center strip 8 inches by 12 inches. Seam wash cloth to each 12-inch side, making finished hood section about 32 inches by 12 inches, less seam allowances. Finish inside seams unless you want to line the hood.

Find center of front jacket section; insert zipper. Shape pocket: baste in position 12 inches from neckline, to cover lower section of zipper. Stitch. With right sides of jacket sections facing, stitch front and back sections at shoulders and side seams, shaping armholes to fit.

Match center hood seam and center back of jacket. Pin hood in position, making pleats to control fullness where hood joins jacket at shoulder seams. Turn edge under 1/2-inch (on edge which will frame face) and stitch. Stitch hood to jacket.

To make long, full sleeves, fold towels lengthwise, with right sides facing, and stitch underarm seam, cutting off excess length. (For shorter pushup sleeves, use a single towel cut in half.) Form casing for elastic by stitching bias tape inside cuff ends of towels. Insert elastic, adjust to size and stitch into position. With right sides facing, pin sleeves in position to armhole. Adjust fullness evenly, baste and stitch.

Turn jacket hem to desired length. Cut rounded corners. Turn hem to right side; stitch rounded edges. Trim seam: clip curve. Turn hem again to wrong side and blind-stitch into position.

Pony Tail Trick

If you've got medium to long hair and you want to try styles featuring a pony tail but can't figure out how to hide the rubber band—there is a trick you can use. First arrange the pony tail, then take a roller-sized portion of hair from the side of your head—this portion should not be part of the pony tail—and divide it into three equal sections. Braid it as far as it will go, then spray it until it's stiff. Do this while you're setting your hair. Put a roller or two in the pony tail for fullness and wind the braid upward in another roller. When hair is dry, feather pony tail, wind braid around its base and smooth pony tail down.

Opening lead—♦ Q

Both North and South had bid their hands to the limit or maybe a trifle further. After winning the opening diamond lead with his king, South played his ace of trumps to see what would happen next.
He found out quickly. West discarded a club and South wished he hadn't bid quite as much. Then he set out to make the best of a bad job and managed to make him slam anyway.
It required perfect timing, plus a favorable diamond break. He led a club to the ace and ruffed a club. Next came the ace of spades and a low diamond discard from dummy. Then he ruffed a spade and another club. Another low spade was ruffed in dummy and then the ace of diamonds was cashed.
This play was most important. South could not give East a chance to get rid of his last diamond.
Now South led one of dummy's good clubs. East couldn't afford to discard. South would just discard in back of him. East also could not afford to ruff low, so he ruffed with the 10 of trumps.
South overruffed with the king and then had the problem of deciding whether to try to ruff a diamond or a spade. Finally he came to the conclusion that West had started with five cards each in diamonds and spades, so South led his last spade and ruffed with dummy's last trump.
Another club left East with no way to stop South from scoring the 12th trick with his eight of trumps.

A-Bid six diamonds. Your partner's hand improved so much after you bid diamonds that I went out of his way to invite a slam. Accept the invitation.
TODAY'S QUESTION
Instead of bidding one no-trump, your partner has rebid to two hearts. What do you do now?

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

Denture Adjustment Eliminates Dislodging

By WILLIAM LAWRENCE, D.D.S.

Q-What would cause my upper denture to pop away from the roof of my mouth every time I yawn or open wide?
A-When the mouth opens wide, a section of the jaw which helps form the hinge joint is thrust forward and downward. This sometimes brings it in contact with the back of the upper denture, thus dislodging it. Reducing thickness and length of the posterior border of the upper denture usually eliminates this problem.

Q-How long must I wait before my immediate lower denture is rebased?
A-Rebasing an "immediate" denture is done to fill in spaces caused by shrinkage of gums following extractions. Amount of shrinkage varies and the decision when to rebase varies accordingly. Usually some weeks elapse before the bulk of post-extraction shrinkage is completed.
Of course, shrinkage of the ridge is a continuing process as long as you live, but occurs at a much slower rate.

Q-Must all false teeth look false? I realize that they're all "boughten" teeth and not custom-made, but should they all look alike?
A-No. There are many shapes, sizes and colors of teeth in both porcelain and plastic, and they can all be adjusted as desired. There are also "characterized" teeth that are tinted, mottled and stained in varying degrees. These teeth are "natural-looking" and quite beautiful, and while they're slightly more expensive, they're well worth it.

Q-My dentures click when I bite. Can this be eliminated?
A-Clicking is usually caused by porcelain teeth. Dentures with porcelain teeth make a sharp, clicking sound when upper and lower teeth are brought together. Plastic teeth eliminate this problem.

By BOB COCHNAR
NEA Automotive Editor

NEW YORK-(NEA)-The other day the Department of Transportation announced (proudly, one suspects) that motor vehicle registration in the United States topped the 100-million mark in 1968.

Now, this certainly comes as good news to somebody. It's an indication of the mobile American way of life and a display of faith in the free enterprise system. Fifty years ago, which is not much time at all, some 2.5 million vehicles were registered in this country.

Think of it: 100 million vehicles, or one for every two people. These cars, trucks and buses have available to them 3.7 million miles of roads, streets, highways and thoroughways, or less than 200 feet of road per vehicle.

In the space of a half-century, we Americans have allowed ourselves to become utterly dominated by the automobile. For many of us, our very existence depends on it.

Each year, the Automobile Manufacturers Association turns out a little book of facts and figures about automobiles. Among other things, the book points out that one business in six is automotive. How many more businesses are automotive-oriented (motels, restaurants, highway shopping centers, etc.) can only be guessed at.

It's undoubtedly true that the American economy would grind to a painful standstill if Americans were suddenly deprived of their cars. At the same time, we would probably be deprived of billboards, air pollution, auto fatalities and other bitter pills we tend to accept as natural consequences of the automobile. But that's another story.

The AMA also notes in its book that the country is blessed with 114,459 auto repair establishments, 211,473 service stations and 33,349 franchised passenger car dealers. To be extremely generous, let's say that each operation employs two mechanics, which gives us a total of roughly 400,000 mechanics.

With 100 million vehicles on the road, it figures out that there are about 50 cars for every mechanic. And this may be why so many garages work on a by-appointment-only basis. Waiting time, while perhaps not as long as for your neighborhood ophthalmologist, tends to drag on. Mechanics, one might think, are comfortably well off.

Why, then, aren't there enough of them to go around? We have conditioned young people to believe that the only way to get ahead is with a college education and that mechanics who (shudder) dirty their hands are an undesirable breed.

Fortunately, the automotive industry is attempting to foster some enthusiasm for the craft. Plymouth recently completed its 20th annual Trouble Shooting Contest in which some 150,000 high school students competed.

The intent is to encourage more mechanically talented students to continue their education and to encourage them to become auto mechanics.

According to Plymouth, since the program began more than 15,000 students have been placed in full or part-time jobs as auto mechanics.

The students, who are offered $125,000 worth of scholarships, prizes, trophies, tools and automobile components, must compete in a written exam and a mechanical competition. The kids work on new cars which have been deliberately tampered with so that each has identical malfunctions.

When a team feels it has returned its car to normal running order, the students and team judge go on a road test. If the team thinks the test has been satisfactory, the car proceeds to final judging.

All of the auto makers are involved in programs which attempt to solve the mechanic shortage. Since skilled technicians can make as much as $250 a week and more in some parts of the country, one would think there should be more interest.

1916 - Purkins & Gates bought the weekly Gazette and made it a companion paper to their new daily, Arkansas Evening Herald - but both papers suspended in 1922.
1926 - Plant was revived by Curtis Cannon as the weekly Hempstead County Review.

Commissioner
Bowie Kuhn
Has to Cheer

ATLANTA (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn concedes he's just a fan at heart. "I can't be neutral at a baseball game," the commissioner said Tuesday on his first trip to Atlanta as the sport's top man. "I tried it a few times after I was named commissioner and it was awful. 'I just can't sit at a game and not cheer,' he said. 'So I've worked out this rule where I al-stopped a Cleveland comeback with 3 2-3 innings of hitless relief for Fritz Peterson. Juan Pizarro, 2-2, in his first start of the year, halted New York on five hits in the nightcap and Ken Harrelson homered for two runs and Tony Horton singled for two more.

The Yankees won their fourth in a row when Gene Michael and Bobby Murcer each singled in two runs and Joe Pepitone one for a 5-0 lead and Jack Aker pitching triumph in the first game after the Mets snapped a 2-2 tie in the fifth on two-run doubles by Weis and ex-Pirate Donn Clendenon. Weis' triple capped a five-run first inning burst in the second game. Tommie Agee had five hits for the Mets in the twin bill, including his 12th homer.

Bob Burda powered the Giants past Atlanta in the first game with a tying two-run pinch homer in the ninth and a winning two-run double in the 10th. Bobby Bonds smacked two homers for the Giants, then socked his 14th of the year in the nightcap before Dave Marshall's two-run single keyed a decisive five-run burst in the sixth.

Right-hander Jerry Robertson, going the distance for the first time in the majors, ended Philadelphia's winning streak at nine games with a six-hitter before the Expos completed their sweep with a four-run eighth inning uprising in the nightcap, Bob Bailey drilling a two-run single to break a 2-2 tie and Coco Laboy doubling in two more runs.

Bailey and Mack Jones paced the first game attack with two RBI apiece.

Put Corrales' two-run double in the fourth broke a 1-1 tie at Los Angeles and Bob Tolman who had three hits drove in a pair of runs as the Reds subdued the Dodgers behind Tony Cloninger.

Larry Dierker, 11-5, scattered seven hits as Houston won its sixth straight and San Diego lost its sixth in a row. Doug Rader doubled home two runs for the Astros.

Cubs Down Gibson to End String

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer
Ron Santo still doesn't think he belongs in the same ring with Bob Gibson, but their latest mismatch has ended with Gibson on the wrong end of a 10-count. After striking out three times against Gibson Friday, Santo poked a 10th inning single that put the wraps on the Chicago Cubs' 3-1 victory over St. Louis ... and ended a string of 56 consecutive no-knockout appearances for the Cardinals' pitching ace.

Santo's RBI single, after a tie-breaking double by Billy Williams, sent Gibson to the showers for the first time in the middle of an inning since the 1967 season. Gibson-fan Santo, however, remained in awe of the St. Louis swiftness.

"I've bragged about Gibson so much, I think I've convinced myself that he's better than I am," the Chicago slugger confessed. The Cubs' two-run 10th broke up a brilliant pitching duel, in 96-degree weather, between Gibson and winner Ferguson Jenkins, 11-5, who scattered seven hits and struck out 10.

In other National League holiday action, the New York Mets trimmed Chicago's East Division lead to seven games with an 11-6, 9-2 doubleheader sweep over Pittsburgh; San Francisco took a pair from Atlanta, 7-6 in 10 innings and 7-3; Montreal stopped Philadelphia twice 8-5 and 7-3; Cincinnati trimmed Los Angeles 4-1, and Houston beat San Diego 4-0.

In the American League, Minnesota bombed Oakland 10-4; Kansas City swept Seattle 13-2 and 3-2; Cleveland defeated New York 4-1 after a 5-4 loss; California topped Chicago 7-3, then bowed to the White Sox 3-1; Boston downed Washington 7-4 after a 5-1 setback and Detroit upended Baltimore 4-1 in a rain-abbreviated 4½-inning game.

Don Kessinger, who had tripped and scored in the third inning, opened the Cubs' 10th with a single, stole second and took third on Glenn Beckert's bunt single. Williams then looped a double to center and Santo's hit chased Gibson.

Jenkins, beating Gibson 3-1 for the second time in less than a week, surrendered a run in the fourth on a walk and singles by Curt Flood and Vada Pinson. The loss was the seventh for the Cardinals in their last nine games.

Light-hitting Al Weis led the Mets' assault against Pittsburgh with a key double in the opener and a bases-loaded triple in the nightcap.

Bob Gibson: "Off the Field, I Should Be Left Alone."

Ira Berkow NEA Sports Editor

"(On the playing field, the athlete) presents himself naked before the world. . . . The athlete shows us what we ideally are as bodies. . . . The world's impersonal process has him as a focal point.

"It is because he is an outstanding instance of what man might do and be that an athlete is an outstanding man. . . . Athletes are excellence in the guise of men.

"(But) sooner or later the athlete falls short. Eventually he reveals some failure of nerve, self-discipline, courage, insight, generosity, caution or imagination. These limitations we treat somewhat in the way we deal with those that characterize thinkers, artists, and religious men. We tend to blame the failures on the individual, not on man. . . .

from "Sport: A Philosophic Inquiry," by Dr. Paul Weiss

NEW YORK — (NEA) — The locker room is a comfortable place, not so much physically — what with stools and simple steel lockers — but mentally. The athlete is alone there with his peers, not having to prove his worth over and over again as he does on the field before crowds.

"I don't like crowds, and fans, except for a very few, are all fair weather," said St. Louis Cardinal pitcher Bob Gibson, suiting up in the sanctity of the clubhouse.

"People think they own you because you're a famous athlete. And that's horse manure. They treat you as an object rather than a human being. My job is to give 100 per cent on the field. Off the field, I should be left alone to be a private man. People just don't see it that way.

"Day in and day out people are coming to me and asking me to do things, talk to them, sign autographs, pose for pictures. And they don't care what you're doing at the time.

"Not long ago I was eating in a restaurant. A woman comes over and asks for an autograph. I told her politely that if she left the paper I would sign it when I was finished eating. She went back, told her husband. He came over and said, 'You think you're too big to sign an autograph.' He tore up the paper and threw it in my face.

"I'm not the type of guy who can turn the other cheek. I waited about five minutes to cool off. Then I went to their table and gave him a piece of my mind. Another time I was sitting on a plane with my wife and some guy comes over and says, 'You're Bob Gibson, aren't you?' I said yes. He said, 'Go to Hell.'

"Recently, my two daughters asked me to take them on the pleasure boat 'Huck Finn' for a ride down the Mississippi in St. Louis. I hesitated because I knew what would happen. Well, I hadn't seen them in two months, so I said O.K. I wore sunglasses and hid my head between my legs. But pretty soon nearly everyone on that boat — must've been 300 people — were around me. I refused to sign any autographs. And I know they went away

Murray Olderman NEA Executive Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — On the greatest day in the life of Mickey Charles Mantle, life went on as usual at 5730 Watson Circle in Dallas, Texas. A swimming pool was in the process of construction in the backyard. There to watch its progress were Mickey Mantle, 16; David Mantle, 12; Billy, 11, and Danny, 9.

Their dad had just received a pulsating nine-minute standing ovation from some 60,000 people in Yankee Stadium, the kind of sentimental outpouring that tugs at tear ducts. Mickey Mantle — the old man — didn't cry, but it took an effort. And he was visibly affected by the demonstration and tribute of the special ceremonies in his honor.

There to share his feeling were his wife Merlyn and his mother and his mother-in-law. Also the men who discovered him and the managers for whom he played and the players with whom he shared 18 years in the big leagues.

But not his four sons.

"They don't go much for this kind of stuff," he explained later. "I guess they'd rather stay home and watch the pool being built."

The pool may be a symbol of affluence in this society, but to Benjamin Braddock ("The Graduate") it was the escape route — down to the bottom in his scuba diving outfit or lounging on an inflated raft sipping beer — and could also be called the instrument of dramatizing the generation gap.

The absence of the Mantle boys from one of baseball's all-time heart-throb moments, and particularly one in which they had a personal stake, vividly portrays baseball's own generation gap.

It's a dry fact in the polls that older people are the ones who stick to baseball, who gush in its sentimentality, who identify vicariously with the heroes of another generation (and therefore can name the starting lineup of the 1934 world champion Detroit Tigers). Baseball's great hold on the public was its tradition, its continuity of records and its obsession with statistics. All these were polarized under one grand heading — the national pastime.

Without denigrating the old-timers, that isn't the scene any more. It's Joe Pepitone and his elaborate coiffure. Not Roger Maris and his crew cut, which was with us just a couple of years ago. The kids dig Pepl. The home runs he's been hitting for the Yankees are a plus. And it's fascinating that Mantle, asked who'd play him in a movie of his life, grinned that big Okie grin and said, "Pepitone . . . or maybe (Joe) Namath."

Mickey didn't resent his boys not being there in Yankee Stadium to share the response and adulation of the fans. He accepted it, as a 37-year-old father. He also happens to be proud of the fact that young Mickey is the star center-fielder of the Riverside Military Academy team of Gainesville, Ga.

Kids still play baseball, but their game isn't related to Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig and steeped tradition. It's a game of big league teams in Seattle and Montreal and Anaheim, Calif. The concept began to change with the franchise shifts of the 1950s when teams began to move around with the frequency of managerial changes and evolved into the ultra-expansion of the 1960s.

For the new kids, records are down the drain. They'd rather carry banners around Shea Stadium.

That's if there's no swimming pool handy.

saying, 'Bob Gibson, that creep.'

"You get callous treatment on the field, too. I'll never forget something that happened two years ago. I had been in a winning streak. Then one game I got bombed for nine runs in about 10 minutes. I was terrible. We didn't even have time for anyone to warm up. As I came off the field, I was booed. And this from the St. Louis fans who are usually good as fans go. The next day I got a bunch of mail from fans apologizing for the others.

"What I like about my job is that I don't hear the crowd. When I'm on the mound it's just me and the batter. But I almost never pay attention to cheers — sure, I like that — or boos. If I had my choice, though, I'd rather pitch before empty stands.

"Mail is interesting, too. During the World Series a Washington sports writer saw me reading mail and asked to look at it. There were hate letters, about my being outspoken on race matters. He printed the letter. I got 3,000 letters apologizing for that one. It took me all winter to read through them. I appreciated that.

"Even though I am outspoken about race, I still feel no obligation to black people or to kids or anyone else. But it's funny. I bought a house in a previously all-white neighborhood in Omaha and some blacks even criticized me for that.

"I do think it's good for kids to have idols, someone to look up to, someone who has achieved a goal. I didn't have someone who represented a goal. I waited until Jackie Robinson got into baseball. All blacks had in those days was Stepin Fetchit, the movie clown. And I remember he embarrassed me, sitting right there in the theater, because he was making a fool of himself and others were making a fool of him. Our futures looked dim. So we'd say, 'Well, let's go out and rob a bank.'

"Now I'm a hero of sorts. But the day will come when people turn away from me. They'll grab onto someone else. That's the way people are. I won't be disappointed or bitter. Maybe I'll even be a little relieved."

NO RAIN IS EXPECTED when the Apollo 11 astronauts land on the moon, but they'll carry this umbrella anyway. It's a gold-plated wire mesh antenna which can be used to beam communications signals, including live television, from the moon to the earth. The antenna, seen in a dry run here with an RCA engineer, has more than 38 miles of gold-plated wire, thinner than human hair, in its 10-foot-diameter reflective surface.

Veto to Take Yesterday Was Nation's 193rd Birthday, Did You Offer a Prayer?

More Votes in Future
LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Constitutional Convention voted Wednesday to require a 60 per cent vote of both houses of the legislature to override a governor's veto.

The convention approved the proposal on a vote of 72-14. The current Constitution requires only a majority to override a veto.

The convention defeated two proposals to change the number of members of the legislature and postponed action until today on another provision that would reduce the number.

To be considered today was a Legislative Branch Committee proposal to reduce the House from 100 to 99 members and the Senate from 35 to 33 members.

The committee proposal would make apportionment of the Senate easier under the single-member district plan already approved by the convention.

Defeated Wednesday was one proposal to increase the House to 102 members and reduce the Senate to 34 members. Also defeated was a proposal to reduce the House to 75 representatives and the Senate to 25 members.

Although no formal vote was taken Wednesday on the committee proposal, an informal show of hands indicated it was favored by only 33 delegates.

Sen. Robert Harvey of Swifton introduced a proposal to be voted on today to retain the present membership.

Yesterday was our country's 193rd birthday. Did you fly your flag? And did you offer a prayer of thanks that we lived in this land, the greatest on earth, and ask for personal guidance for future undertakings as well as help for our leaders in the important decisions they must make? If not, it's not too late to send a petition heavenward today.

Dr. Edward L.R. Elson, chaplain to the United States Senate, has said, "The profoundest thing we can say about America is that America begins where the Bible begins: 'In the beginning God...' Such is the testimony of our instruments of government, and such the message of our authentic spokesmen."

Bearing this in mind, our astronauts offered prayer and read from the Holy Bible last Christmas during their space flight. Now the atheist in New England who promoted the abolition of formal prayer in the public schools is out to have our pioneers in space quite voicing their prayers in a public way. Petitions to off-set her ungodly efforts are now being circulated, and it is hoped that you will sign one if given the opportunity.

According to Leonard Ravenhill, "The self-sufficient do not pray, the self-righteous cannot pray." But none of those types founded this country, and none of these types are being sent on our space explorations.

When Dr. Elson discussed the Christian's obligation to his country in a recent publication called "Decision," he said the obligation was greater now than ever before. And it is four-fold — to think, to discuss issues and concerns with others, to vote, to pray for and encourage our leaders in coming to wise conclusions.

Another Senate Chaplain, the late Peter Marshall, had a Prayer for America that included these words: Our Father, we pray for this land. We need Thy help in this time of testing and uncertainty, when men who could fight together on the field of battle seem strangely unable to work together around conference tables for peace. . . . To Thy glory was this Republic established. For the advancement of the Christian faith did the Founding Fathers give their life's heritage, passed down to us. We would pray that all over this land there may be a return to the faith of those men and women. . . .

Make us, the citizens of this land, want to do the right things. Make us long to have right attitudes. Help us to be Christian in our attitudes. Let all that we say and do spring out of understanding hearts. Make us willing to seek moral objectives together, that in united action this nation may be as resolute for righteousness and peace as she has been for war. . . .

Bless this land that we love so much, our Father, and help her to deposit her trust, not in armies and navies, in wealth and material resources, or in achievements of the human mind, but in that righteousness which alone exaltheeth any nation, and by which alone peace can finally come to us. This we ask in that name that is above every name, Thy Son, Jesus Christ, our Redeemer. Amen.

Mentally Ill Child Needs Health Care

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
WASHINGTON (AP) — Health care for the mentally ill child is "uncertain, variable and inadequate," says a federal study commission.

Eight states have no facilities at all, public or private. It was recommended in the study released Monday that 100 child development councils be established to see that proper care and mental health services were available.

Legislation to implement five pilot projects will be proposed, said Sen. Abraham D. Ribicoff, D-Conn., who sponsored the bill creating the commission three years ago.

The commission said the admission of teen-agers to state hospitals has increased about 150 per cent in the last decade. Instead of being helped, the study said, "the vast majority are the worse for the experience."

"This is true on all levels, rich and poor, rural and urban . . . only a fraction of our young people get the help they need at the time they need it."

Tricia Would Like Prince to Visit U.S.

By DEE WEDEMEYER
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Tricia Nixon said today she would like to invite Prince Charles and Princess Anne to visit the White House make a good will tour of America.

"I think the subject will come up," Tricia said at the first news conference she has held since her father was elected president last November.

She did not say specifically when she would invite Prince Charles and Princess Anne.

At the 15-minute news conference, Tricia fielded questions with ease, smiling brightly and even evoking laughter from the newsmen who wanted to know about her political ambitions, her life in the White House, and her romantic interest in 20-year-old Prince Charles.

"Let me just say," Tricia said diplomatically, "Prince Charles is my sister's age."

Tricia is 23. Her sister Julie, who is married to David Eisenhower, will be 21 Saturday.

Tricia said she had never met Prince Charles or his sister, Princess Anne.

Princess Anne will attend a dinner dance in Tricia's honor tonight given by U.S. Ambassador and Mrs. Walter Annenberg, her hosts for her week's stay in Britain.

Tricia said it would make "life simpler" if newsmen didn't link her name romantically with various suitors.

"I really have a lot of friends," she commented. "But I don't have one particular friend."

Tricia said she did not plan to take a permanent job during her father's White House years and planned to continue doing volunteer work and traveling.

"It's very hard to hold a steady job," she added. "And besides it's only four or eight years and you ought to make the most of it."

Soviet Union Has 70 ABM In Operation

By ERIC WAHA
Associated Press Writer
VIENNA (AP) — President Nixon's national security adviser, Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, says Congress could approve the administration's antiballistic missile plan without "kicking off a tremendous arms race" with the Soviet Union.

In an interview broadcast by the Austrian television network Friday night, Kissinger noted that "the Soviet Union has close to 70 ABMs today. We will not deploy our first missile until 1973, late in 1973."

"Now I cannot be persuaded that we are kicking off a tremendous arms race if we are beginning to do something that the Soviet Union has already done and that will not match the Soviet total until 1974."

Nixon's proposal to develop the Safeguard ABM defense system for possible deployment in the 1970s is expected to be voted on in Congress next week.

The ABM, Kissinger said, "is primarily designed for three possible contingencies. One would be called the 'China problem' which really means any new nuclear country; secondly, accidental or irrational attack; and thirdly, protection against a conceivable first strike by a growing Soviet missile capacity against our land-based missiles."

He added that the long-awaited Strategic Arms Limitation Talks between the United States and the Soviet Union, tentatively set to begin in early August, would not deal with "that part of ABM that is relevant to Communist China or other third countries."

"If the Soviet Union wants to protect itself against Communist China," Kissinger said, "we will not argue with them about that."

He indicated, however, that if the talks led to a U.S.-Soviet agreement limiting deployment of ABMs, the Safeguard schedule could be modified.

"It will not be until the end of 1974 that we have 70 ABMs," Kissinger said. "In the interval there can be all sorts of arrangements, and we have built into the system—into our proposal—a systematic review, a yearly review" of the ABM program.

Scientists Answer Laird's Arguments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The effectiveness of the Safeguard missile defense system can be countered by a quick increase in the number of Russian attack rockets, say three scientists in response to the arguments of Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said the scientists' report Tuesday was devastating. The authors are Jerome Wiesner, George W. Rathjens Jr., and Steven Weinberg of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Wiesner co-authored an anti-ABM book commissioned by Kennedy.

Germany Recalls Aden Envoys

BONN, Germany (AP) — West Germany announced Wednesday it is recalling its ambassador to Aden in response to South Yemen's recognition of Communist-ruled East Germany, but added that diplomatic relations have not been formally broken.

Government spokesman Conrad Ahlers told a news conference that a formal break with Aden "is not justified by German interests in South Yemen."

The freeze in relations follows a pattern set last month, when the Bonn government shut down its mission in Phnom Penh after Cambodia established full relations with East Germany.

Cambodia retaliated by breaking off relations with Bonn.

House Guardian Has Become An Institution

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) Brushing dandruff off the Speaker's shoulders isn't listed as one of the 114 duties of the official Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives, but that doesn't faze Fishbait Miller.

"All the members of the House are my responsibility and if John W. (Speaker John W. McCormack) has dandruff, I've got to get it off," proclaims Miller, whose real name is William M. but who has been called Fishbait since he was a 75-pound shrimp back in Pascagoula, Miss.

"I brush off Majority Leader Albert (Carl Albert) too. Once I told a congressman her horse didn't match. If the ladies in the House get careless with how they sit, I remind them there are wolves in the gallery."

Miller, now 59, bespectacled 190-pounder, has become something of an institution around Capitol Hill as the 40,000-year guardian of the moccas and mores of the men who make the country's laws.

He has been on intimate terms with every president since, and including, Franklin D. Roosevelt. He has had two personal letters this year from President Nixon, both starting, "Dear Fishbait." Letters addressed simply "Fishbait" find their way to Miller's spacious suite in the Capitol.

Miller, now 59, was brought to Washington 37 years ago by Mississippi Rep. William Colmer. He worked in the mail room as a sorter, later assistant sergeant at arms, minority doorkeeper and finally doorkeeper, a post he has held for the last 20 years. He has a law degree.

The office was instituted by Congress March 5, 1789 and from the beginning has been something of a misnomer. The doorkeeper does much more than watch the doors.

Miller has 340 permanent employees under him, more than any other officer of the House. They include doormen, messengers, pages and barbers. He oversees 13 rest rooms, five barber shops, two snack bars, two cloak rooms and 28 telephones. He supervises the folding room which sends out more than 350 million pieces of mail from the 435 congressmen.

Besides brushing away dandruff, the doorkeeper lights congressmen's cigars, helps them on with their coats and tells each, "Good speech."

He introduces visiting dignitaries and at joint sessions of Congress stands at the rear door and cries: "Mister speaker, the President of the United States."

U.S. Troops Maintain Operations

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON (AP) — Despite the sharp decrease in North Vietnamese and Viet Cong military actions, U.S. troops are maintaining the same level of operations the U.S. Command said today.

"It's the same as it has been for the past several months," a spokesman said when asked about American operations. "We're continuing to operate in our areas, to search out the enemy, to look for caches. We are at a full level of operations."

Battlefield communiques did not list any significant ground fight during the past 24 hours. The level of activity across South Vietnam dropped to its lowest in more than a year.

The U.S. Command said it had 12 operations of battalion size or larger currently under way, about the same number it has been conducting for the past six months.

U.S. officials have said they do not know whether the decrease in attacks and the withdrawal of enemy troops to border areas is a signal that Hanoi wants to deescalate or just a pause to regroup and resupply.

Only one significant rocket or mortar attack was reported in morning communiques.

Ten mortar shells hit a base camp of the U.S. 4th Infantry Division in the central highlands 245 miles northeast of Saigon. Some Americans were wounded but none was killed, headquarters said. No damage was reported.

U.S. B52 bombers struck for the second time this week at targets along the Cambodian border and northeast of Saigon. Spokesmen described the raids as the heaviest in the area in 10 weeks.

Warplanes dropped nearly 2,000 tons of explosives on base camps, bunker and tunnel complexes and storage depots with a mile and a half of Cambodia. The spokesman said the raids were intended to keep pressure on the North Vietnamese 1st and 7th Divisions deployed in Tay Ninh, Binh Long and Phuoc Long provinces, all of which border Cambodia.

The South Vietnamese command reported three Viet Cong terrorist attacks and the shelling of a district town. Nine civilians and one government soldier were killed, and 36 civilians and four soldiers were wounded.

U.S. Headquarters also reported that an Army observation helicopter was shot down Friday 52 miles south of Da Nang, killing the three Americans aboard. A total of 2,828 helicopters have been lost in the war since Jan. 1, 1961.

Wilkins Wants Negroes to Get Together

By DON MCKEE
Associated Press Writer
JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Civil rights leader Roy Wilkins, a critic of "Black Power" in the past, says he wants to meet with Black Panthers and other Negro militants to explore areas of possible agreement and unity.

"I just feel that black organizations ought to get together and actually beat out a kind of strategy or procedure," said Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), in an interview Sunday night.

The NAACP, the nation's oldest and largest civil rights organization, opens its 60th annual convention today. About 2,000 delegates were expected. Convention headquarters is the Hotel Heidelberg, traditional site for conventions in this Deep South city.

Wilkins said he was considering seeking a meeting with Black Panther head Bobby Seale of Oakland, Calif. "I'm thinking strongly of doing it even though it may be misunderstood," he said.

"I'm just trying to get up nerve enough to go ahead and do it, knowing it's going to strike some in our ranks with dismay," he said.

Sandwich Man Demands Free Elections

MADRID (AP) — The Spanish Supreme Court confirmed Monday a seven-month jail sentence and $142 fine against Gonzalo Arias, the "sandwich man."

Arias walked around Madrid Oct. 21, 1968, wearing a sandwich board reading: "I humbly demand free elections." He was arrested and charged with an attempt "against the Spanish fundamental laws."

Arias, a former translator for the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, wrote and printed in Paris a clandestine novel titled Los Encarcelados (The Sandwich Men). In it, he described how a "sandwich man" sparked a series of peaceful sandwich board demonstrations that led to the downfall of the "Marshall Franco's" regime.
